NEWARK, NJ— New Jersey Symphony is back in Jersey City this summer with the Chamber Music After Hours series on select Wednesday nights through July and into August.

The Chamber Music After Hours series is a return of the New Jersey Symphony to Jersey City's Provost Square Plaza—in front of the future Symphony Center venue at 151 Bay Street, Jersey City, NJ—after a very successful first season of presenting chamber music performances through summer 2024.

Area residents and community members from across Hudson County and beyond greatly enjoyed the sound of music filling the plaza. The concerts also featured guest performers who occasionally add a visual element to the program, such as the dancers from Kulture Kool.

The 2025 series expands on the favorite themes from last season while also providing new experiences, such as a program featuring East Asian music and a concert that explores the idea of home featuring an appearance by Allison Loggins-Hull, the New Jersey Symphony's Resident Artistic Partner.

These free events are open for all Jersey City residents and beyond to enjoy. No reservations are required. Attendees are encouraged to bring chairs or blankets for seating. There are many options nearby for beverages and food, and some events may feature on-site vendors.
